

Our Relation with God's Creations

"Worship none but Allah; be kind to parents, relatives, orphans and the needy; speak kindly to people; establish prayer; and pay alms-tax." Surah Baqarah 83.

This is an ayah that really digs deep on the fact that we are all humans and Muslims and that we are all aiming for the same place, Jannah. We can get there by caring for each other and improve our relationship with one another even if we think that our relationship is already perfect. Imagine this, a world where all humans get along and love and care for each other, where we love people as much as we love our parents or Allah. Can you imagine a world like that? Love is a beautiful and powerful feeling that connects us all. In Islam, love for Allah is the foundation of faith. This love inspires us to care for His creations including our fellow human beings, animals, and the environment. Understanding love in Allah is very important. Allah says in the Quran "Oh you have believed I love you more than 70 moms". Now I will tell you how much Allah loves us.

Allah's love is immense and unconditional. He created the world and everything in it out of love. He gave you amazing food to eat and the wealth he has given you. Muslims believe that by following Allah's guidance we show our love for Him. This guidance includes being kind, just, and merciful to all of Allah's creations. We sometimes do not care about other people but we do not know that being arrogant and not caring for Allah's creation we can get all the things that we have taken away just because of being arrogant and not caring for Allah's creation. When we love Allah, we should also love and respect His creations. For example, one time a man stumbled upon a well. He was very thirsty so he takes his shoe and scoops out some water and drinks it. When he turns around, he sees a dog that is much thirstier than he was. So, he takes of his shoe again and scoops out water. He gives the water to the dog and the dog quenched its thirst. Muhammad (PBUH) says that this man will be promised a place in Jannah. This shows that we should care for Allah's creations. Also, Prophet Muhammad (PBUH) taught us to be gentle with animals and to plant trees, even if the end of the world is near. This shows how important it is to care for the world around us.

One recent event that shows this love is the global response to natural disasters, like the earthquake in Morocco in 2023. People from all over the world, regardless of their religion, came together to help those affected. This act of kindness and compassion is a reflection of the love Allah wants us to have for each other. Volunteers, organizations, and governments provided food, shelter, and medical aid to the victims. This united effort shows how we can live out the teachings of Islam by helping those in need. When we help others, we are fulfilling our duty to care for Allah's creations and showing our love for Him. Allah loves when we care for his creations.

In conclusion, love for Allah is the heart of our faith, guiding us to be kind and compassionate to all His creations. By understanding and practicing this love, we can make the world a better place. The response to the earthquake in Morocco reminds us of the importance of helping each other and protecting the world we live in. Let's continue to show our love for Allah by caring for His creations every day.
